A fast-growing premium pet sitting service based in North Wiltshire has strengthened its team with the appointment of 21-year-old Mia Baulch as demand continues to rise across the county and surrounding areas.

Birddog Catwalk, founded in Malmesbury, has welcomed Bristol-based Mia as a dog walker, pet sitter and administrator as it expands its reach across Wiltshire, Bath, Bristol and the Cotswolds.

Mia brings several years of hands-on experience working with animals to the role. Before joining Birddog Catwalk, she worked at a kennel for just under two years, developing confidence in handling a wide range of breeds and temperaments. Prior to that, she spent three years working as a hotel cleaner, where she built strong customer service skills alongside her practical experience with animals.

“I am loving it so far. I am able to interact with dogs personally and I love getting to know their different personalities. I’m also enjoying interacting with new people,” said Mia Baulch. “I love working with Holly. Getting to know her just makes it more enjoyable to work for this company.”

Mia says her focus is firmly on ensuring both pets and owners feel supported and reassured.

“To be able to look after and make the pets happy is what success looks like for me. I want to make sure I am taking good care of the pet and helping them in any way I can. I’m also keen to help Holly publicise the company and make sure I’m making a good effort with both the pets and their owners,” she said.

Outside of work, Mia is a keen reader who enjoys discovering new books through social media and recommendations from friends. She lives with friends in the Bristol area and says spending time with family, friends and her cats is what makes her happiest.

Founder Holly Bird, who launched Birddog Catwalk to offer pet owners a reliable, high-quality alternative to traditional kennels, said the new appointment reflects sustained growth in the Wiltshire area.

“We are delighted to welcome Mia to the Birddog Catwalk team. Her experience working in a kennel environment means she is confident and capable around a wide range of dogs, and she brings a calm and caring approach to everything she does,” said Holly Bird, Founder of Birddog Catwalk.

"As demand for our services continues to grow across Wiltshire and the surrounding areas, it's important that we build a team who genuinely care about the animals in their charge. Mia shares that passion and commitment to giving owners real peace of mind."

Birddog Catwalk offers pet sitting services, dog walking and drop-in visits to families, couples and homeowners across North Wiltshire and beyond, with overnight cover available further afield if required. Prices start from £15 per hour. For more information, visit <https://birddogcatwalk.com/>
